

A Space to Build Partnerships

The shared space of the Hub facilitates a spirit of collaboration and builds a strong support network. Our space provides tenants with the tools and connections to scale up their capacity and impact, including a refrigerated truck that can be used for distribution.

Bull City Cool food hub is a project of Reinvestment Partners, a nonprofit advocacy and community development corporation.

A Food Hub for Social Justice and Community Revitalization

Bull City Cool is a shared cool, cold and dry storage warehouse — as well as office space — where nonprofits and for-profits aggregate and distribute local farmers' fresh food. Our goal is to strengthen Durham's local food ecosystem by providing space and connections that benefit local farmers, food businesses and hunger-relief nonprofits.

A Space for Social Justice

One in four people in Durham are hungry. The Hub facilitates access to healthy, fresh food for hunger-relief nonprofits, who then distribute it to those in need. The Hub also convenes nonprofits for collaboration on anti-poverty efforts.

A Space That Supports Local Farmers

The Hub strengthens the local food system by providing new market opportunities for local farmers. It also hosts educational workshops for farmers, such as training in Good Agricultural Practices (GAP) needed to access institutional buyers like the public school system.
